

Diane

Your Pattern Recognition Report

Assessment Date: March 07, 2026

Reassessment Date: May 16, 2026

Growing the spine that was never allowed to form.

Your SPINE

Your SPINE reveals Power at 39% as your strongest vertebra and Embodiment at 21% as the vertebra asking for the most attention. This is your starting point, not your destination.

Diane — SPINE Overview

Vertebra	Score	Stage	Description
S — Sovereignty	25%	Blank Page	The capacity to own your own interior — desire, arousal, and erotic selfhood
P — Power	39%	Excavation	The capacity to act from your own authority — consent, communication, b

I — Identity	37%	Excavation	The capacity to know and define yourself — erotic identity, orientation, ex
N — Nourishment	24%	Blank Page	The capacity to receive and enjoy — pleasure, receiving, and erotic play wi
E — Embodiment	21%	Blank Page	The capacity to live in and trust your body — somatic presence, sensory ra

Reading Your Shape

What your map is telling you

Your SPINE is compressed and low — Embodiment at 21%, Nourishment at 24%, Sovereignty at 25%, Identity at 37%, Power at 39%. Every vertebra is asking for attention, and you're being asked to open sexually before the foundation exists to support it.

Embodiment at 21% combined with Sovereignty at 25% tells us: the sexual reconnection your partner wants cannot happen safely until you have more of yourself back. The sexual dormancy isn't a problem to fix. It's your system's way of protecting you until the foundation is stronger. Distress body checks in Embodiment and Sovereignty confirm it — your body is saying 'not yet' and that response deserves to be honored, not overridden.

Diane's map shows someone in survival mode — holding four clusters in a tight, compressed shape while being asked to open sexually before the foundation exists to support it. Her lowest cluster (Aliveness at 19%) combined with Self at 26% tells us: the sexual reconnection her partner wants cannot happen safely until Diane has more of herself back. This is not resistance to intimacy. This is wisdom.

A Note for Couples Work

Diane and her partner's maps show a significant Forward Gap — he is further along in his reclamation than she is in hers. This is not a problem to solve. It is a timing difference to honor. Pushing toward intimate reconnection before Diane's Self and Between foundations are stronger risks replicating the system's pattern — compliance rather than genuine desire. The most intimate thing her partner can do right now is wait, with her, without pressure.

Your anchor: Attachment Pattern Awareness (48%)

Power is your anchor vertebra — at 39%, it's the strongest point on your SPINE. Attachment Pattern Awareness at 48% is the peak. There's a part of you that sees the relational patterns clearly, even when you can't yet change them. That seeing is not nothing. It's your Power vertebra, holding. It's where we'll build from.

What Was Done To You

Eschatological Urgency

Everything was a cosmic emergency. The stakes were always infinite, the judgment always imminent. Your nervous system learned that pleasure without punishment doesn't exist — that joy is borrowed time, that good things are followed by consequences. Intimate Levity at 15% tells us that emergency state is still running even after the doctrine left. The first work here is almost embarrassingly small: one minute of something genuinely pleasurable, with nothing required of it. No meaning. No significance. Just: this is good, and that is allowed.

Community Surveillance

The community was the system's enforcement mechanism. Belonging was conditional — on compliance, on performance, on visible purity. Leaving didn't just mean changing beliefs. It meant losing everything at once. Your over-pleasing, your boundary collapse with new partners or communities — this isn't weakness. It's your nervous system trying to prevent another total loss by managing everyone's experience of you before they decide you're too much. The work is not to stop caring about belonging. It's to find out what belonging feels like when it isn't conditional.

This is the wound's architecture. Knowing how it was built is the beginning of knowing how to unbuild it — not with force, but with the specific tools the specific structure requires.

SPINE Domain Detail

S — Sovereignty — 25% (Blank Page)

The capacity to own your own interior — desire, arousal, and erotic selfhood without external permission.

S — Sovereignty: 25% (Blank Page)

Desire Ownership: 30% → 68% (gap: 38)

Arousal-Shame Decoupling: 22% → 62% (gap: 40)

Erotic Self-Acceptance: 24% → 62% (gap: 38)

P — Power — 39% (Excavation)

The capacity to act from your own authority — consent, communication, boundaries, and relational awareness.

P — Power: 39% (Excavation)

Consent Clarity: 42% → 72% (gap: 30)

Communication Capacity: 35% → 70% (gap: 35)

Boundary Sovereignty: 32% → 68% (gap: 36)

Attachment Pattern Awareness: 48% → 72% (gap: 24)

I — Identity — 37% (Excavation)

The capacity to know and define yourself — erotic identity, orientation, exploration, vision, and integration.

I — Identity: 37% (Excavation)

Erotic Identity Clarity: 38% → 70% (gap: 32)

Orientation & Preference Exploration: 42% → 65% (gap: 23)

Conscious Exploration Capacity: 32% → 65% (gap: 33)

Sexual Future Vision: 45% → 72% (gap: 27)

Integration Readiness: 28% → 62% (gap: 34)

N — Nourishment — 24% (Blank Page)

The capacity to receive and enjoy — pleasure, receiving, and erotic play without earning it first.

N — Nourishment: 24% (Blank Page)

Pleasure Permission: 25% → 65% (gap: 40)

Receiving Capacity: 30% → 65% (gap: 35)

Erotic Play Capacity: 18% → 58% (gap: 40)

E — Embodiment — 21% (Blank Page)

The capacity to live in and trust your body — somatic presence, sensory range, spontaneity, levity, and curiosity.

E — Embodiment: 21% (Blank Page)

Body Trust: 28% → 65% (gap: 37)

Sensory Range: 22% → 60% (gap: 38)

Spontaneous Presence: 20% → 55% (gap: 35)

Intimate Levity: 15% → 55% (gap: 40)

Embodied Curiosity: 20% → 58% (gap: 38)

Your Active Edges

Intimate Levity — 15% (Blank Page)

At 15%, joy still has a tax — good things are suspect, lightness is shallow. The work here is one moment of genuine lightness that doesn't come with a bill.

Erotic Play Capacity — 18% (Blank Page)

At 18%, intimacy is still serious business — high stakes, cosmic consequences. The work here is discovering that laughter belongs in intimate space. That lightness is intimate.

Spontaneous Presence — 20% (Blank Page)

At 20%, being fully in your body still triggers the old surveillance response. The work here is thirty seconds of actually being here — not planning, not monitoring. Just: here.

Aliveness & Play

Aliveness at 19%. Let's be honest about what that means: the system shut down your capacity for uncomplicated pleasure. Play, spontaneity, lightness — these were luxuries at best, sins at worst. Your nervous system learned that joy is borrowed time. That good things are followed by consequences.

Intimate Levity at 15% is where the suppression is deepest. But here's the thing — this isn't the last cluster on the list because it's least important. It's here because it's what everything else is building toward. The capacity to enjoy being alive. Not to earn aliveness. Not to perform it. To actually feel it.

The first work here is almost embarrassingly small: one minute of something genuinely pleasurable, with nothing required of it. No meaning. No significance. Just: this is good, and that is allowed.

Your Wound Architecture

Diane — HDR Wound Mechanisms

Pendulum Risk

Diane — Pendulum Risk

The pendulum is active. Your nervous system is caught between two positions — total suppression and compulsive overcorrection — and it swings between them because the middle ground hasn't been built yet. This isn't a moral failure. It's a nervous system pattern: the same mechanism that kept you 'pure' now drives the 'out of control' moments. They're not opposites. They're the same wound, expressing in two directions. The work is not to stop the swing by force — that just creates a harder rebound. The work is to build the middle ground: integrated, chosen, conscious desire. Sovereignty and Embodiment are where this ground gets built. As those domains strengthen, the pendulum naturally slows — not because you controlled it, but because you finally have somewhere to stand.

Your First Milestones

What the next shifts will feel like

Intimate Levity — toward First Threshold (30%)

Joy had a tax in the old system — good things were suspect, lightness was shallow, pleasure was borrowed time. The first threshold is one moment of genuine lightness that doesn't come with a bill. Just: this is nice. And that's enough.

Erotic Play Capacity — toward First Threshold (30%)

The system made intimacy serious — high stakes, moral weight, cosmic consequences. The first threshold is the moment you realize that play belongs here too. That laughter and lightness aren't disrespectful — they're intimate.

Spontaneous Presence — toward First Threshold (25%)

Presence was dangerous — being fully here meant being fully visible to the omniscient observer. The first threshold is thirty seconds in your body. Actually here. Not planning, not monitoring, not performing. Just: here.

Embodied Curiosity — toward First Threshold (30%)

The system shut down curiosity about the body — there was nothing to discover, only rules to follow. The first threshold is a genuine 'I wonder...' about your own body. What does it like? What would happen if? The question is the beginning.

Your Practice Prescription

The Origin Question Resourcing Weeks any

When shame arrives — and it will — ask one question before you accept it: Where did I first learn this was shameful?

Why this for you: This practice supports your foundational work.

What you'll notice: Shame will start to have different textures. Some will feel old and borrowed. Some will feel current and yours. The sorting gets faster.

The Lighthouse Healing Weeks 3-8

Once a day — it takes two minutes — find one moment of genuine pleasure from the last 24 hours. Something small is perfect. The first sip of something warm. A song that moved through you. Sunlight on skin. The specific satisfaction of a door closing behind you at the end of the day. Write it down. Just the moment and what it felt like in your body. Not an analysis. Not gratitude. Just: this happened, and my body registered it as good.

Why this for you: Pleasure Permission at 22% means pleasure has been shut down or made dangerous. This practice teaches your nervous system that noticing good things is safe.

What you'll notice: Your pleasure vocabulary will expand. Things you didn't register as pleasurable will start to surface. The body begins to trust that pleasure is allowed.

The Return Letter Pattern Weeks single session

Choose one shame. One specific thing you carry that the system gave you — desire, doubt, orientation, your body, the wanting itself. Write it a letter. Three sentences is enough:

Why this for you: Integration Readiness at 22% — the past and present selves haven't met yet. This practice begins the introduction.

What you'll notice: Relief that may surprise you. Grief underneath. The shame may return but with less authority. Each return letter makes the next one easier.

Diane, your body's 'not yet' is not resistance — it's wisdom. Your SPINE gives you a place to stand while the foundation strengthens underneath. Start with Daily Return. Let your Embodiment vertebra know it belongs to you before asking it to open to anyone else.

The reconnection your partnership needs starts here — not in the bedroom, but in your own hands, on your own body, with your own breath. As Sovereignty and Embodiment strengthen, the rest of your SPINE will follow.

A reassessment is recommended at 10 weeks to track movement, celebrate progress, and adjust your practice prescription.